

The EUREL website provides an overview of religions in Europe: their sociological dimension, their legal management and their impact on social life. It gathers comparative information concerning the countries of enlarged Europe (EU member states, candidate countries and other European countries), or concerning Europe as a whole.

The website also provides news and current information concerning religions in the European countries. A newsletter gives up-to-date information on law and sociology of religions.

The information is provided and checked by a network of correspondents, specialists of law or social sciences in the relevant country.

This project is carried out by PRISME - Société, Droit et Religion en Europe, a research unit of the CNRS and of the University of Strasbourg.
